The teachings of Christ have brought many great beliefs, and given meanings to even the smallest experience. Through the summer I have been brought before a teacher to help me learn about God, and of the great people that have been sent to guide the world in the right direction through different teachings and journeys. The lessons have many different interpretations for every person on how they want to see them, this will be how I have taken the lessons into my life and how I see them.

Through philosophy, I learned to question who I am and how I treat others and look to God for the answers and discussion. The way that you speak is a reflection of who you are, not just to God but to everyone and to yourself. Philosophy translated to the love of wisdom, showing that the studies are for people who have devoted their life to finding the wisdom of the world. Biblical Science was also included in this lesson, given the information that everything has a beginning and a beginner. The bible has inspired many scientific theories and given many solutions to them.

The Bible has influenced many things that we live on day by day, like laws and morals. In the Bible sins are described to us, and the people have made rules in the world circled or inspired by the laws that God had set. Many do not really know how rules and some laws came to be, but if they simply skim over some verses of the Bible they would most likely find at least one ethical or moral law in the verse or page. A vast majority of the world's laws and morals stem from a biblical verse in one way or another.

The Bible also teaches about history, though some may not see it as true history, most see it as history. In the biggest religions around the world the history is very similar if not the same, though some don't fully see Jesus as the messiah as we do, though he is seen as a profit of God, respectfully. Though it may vary from place to place the history of the world is very important as said before, everything has a beginning and a beginner, a start and an end. The history taught in the Bible is very inspirational in many aspects of life giving examples of pushing through the hardships to get to the good after, and how remaining humble and faithful gives the best reward, a spot in heaven.

The way that the world works is that we must work harder than we should have to, because of the history of human life. Humanity started in the Garden of Eden, with Adam and Eve, they lived very simple lives in the garden and had very little work to do, only to tend to the plants and live off the land they were given. Given very few rules as not to eat the fruit of the forbidden tree, they had still caved and took the fruit, sending mankind into the age of work. The world evolved to have us work hard to live better, though it may be hard and tedious, in the end it gives great reward and even better feeling knowing that you did what you wanted. The way we work reflects onto us by the things that we get from the work we do, giving a sense of accomplishment once we achieve our goal.

In the sociology section I learned that I choose my faith by actions, though it is good to take suggestions from parents and some adult figures in life, your faith is chosen by you. The first society was between Adam and Eve, everything was peaceful and cooperative between the two, creating the first and most peaceful society. The world has strayed from the original by a very wide margin, making it seem as though the first never existed, this is from the decisions made by large groups in the world. Even with the great difference that we have made we can still become a better society and get closer to a perfect one, though the world can change with just one individual, it can be changed with a group of people. Even if the world can be changed with a group, you should not allow others to sway your decisions as they wish, unless it is to help make better decisions in life. Romans 12:2 states that you should not copy others and to act of your own will.

The human body is only temporary while the soul is forever, the body can be touched by anyone, while the soul can only be touched by God. The soul is completely different from the body, the soul is only changed from a baptism or a rebirth of the soul into a better life. After a baptism one begins a new life, a holy life devoted to spreading the good word and doing great things for people. Once you go through a baptism you are to feel refreshed and anew, though I have never experienced a baptism yet one day I want to feel the renewal of one. The soul is the true shape and form of a person, and God has a plan for us before we are even related to anything or anyone, he shapes our soul and future before anything.

The lessons from this summer have taught me many things about life and how I should live as God wants me to, not as others do. The teachings of God have given many aspects of my life better and deeper meaning, the way I see the world is different from before as I didn't put much meaning to anything as I do now. Everything in the world has meaning, it may not be to me but it has meaning to something in the world, whether it be the smallest bug or the biggest animal, everything has a life and meaning.
